About the Constitutions, Rights and Justice (CRJ) Research Group:

Established in 2021, the Constitutions, Rights and Justice research group seeks to foster a collaborative approach regarding how to talk about and conduct research on the nature of constitutions, different categories of rights (i.e., social, political, legal and employment) and the importance of justice in its many forms.

The Constitutions, Rights and Justice research group seeks to foster a collaborative approach regarding how to talk about and conduct research on the nature of constitutions, different categories of rights (i.e., social, political, legal and employment) and the importance of justice in its many forms. This innovative group is based within the Institute of Arts and Humanities at the University of Worcester. It brings together academics at the University and other institutions, legal practitioners and active and retired judges to work together on a myriad of issues and seek scope for collaboration within the wider academy and legal practice.

The group's activity comprises publications, conferences, and research workshops, and public and community engagement. The group also hosts an annual public lecture, delivered by a prominent figure from the rights and justice community.

The group's director is Dr Chris Monaghan. If you have any questions, please contact Chris at c.monaghan@worc.ac.uk.

Aims

The aims of the group are to:

- Engage with the public, the academy and legal practice through the dissemination of research and scholarship, the hosting of Public Lectures, workshops and research seminars.
- Foster collaboration between ordinary members, associate members and the wider academy and legal practice.
- Produce innovative research and other scholarly work that advance the work of the group.

The group's director is Dr Chris Monaghan. If you have any questions, please contact Chris at c.monaghan@worc.ac.uk

About this Document:

This document lists the publications of the CRJ's ordinary members between 2021-2024.

If you are an ordinary member of the group, but your publications are not listed below, please contact the group's director, Dr Chris Monaghan c.monaghan@worc.ac.uk.

Ordinary members will periodically receive e-mails to update the CRJ about recent publications or other scholarly activity. Please respond to these e-mails to ensure that the CRJ website is kept up to date.
